

Nordlux: Balkan Traditions

So, I'll just start recording now. And now we are recording. So, hello and welcome again to the show, North Lux Bellator.

How are you? I'm fine, thank you. And I'll try to make my position clear. And to inform the people about some of the ancient traditions that I know.

And of course, maybe I'm missing something because the Balkans are quite complicated regions. And a lot of people had some differences in the traditions and so on. But at least the old Bulgarian traditions, I'll try to make some educated guess about the origins and what they symbolized and so on and so forth.

Yeah, the Balkans have always been notorious for being a region of somewhat of instability and like a clash of civilizations, haven't they? Yes, because it's a border region. It's very important because it's a crossroads of Europe. The Jewish-dominated Silk Road basically ends there in Constantinople.

And these Balkans, after the retreat of the Aryan, maybe not the retreat, it's not the correct word, but the eradication of the Aryan gene from the Asia Minor and from the Middle East and from Central Asia, even for the Far East, the Balkans were the last stronghold against the invasion. As I mentioned before, the Bulgarian ruler, Tervel, he managed to smash the Arabs, a very strong Arab force, in a campaign that lasted for two years, since 717-718. And the defeat of the Arab forces speeded up the degradation of the Arab caliphate.

Also, the Turks obviously invaded here, the Mongols. It's a battleground of the civilization. Yeah, you were right about that.

Yeah, so that is sort of, in terms of the actual spiritual tradition, maybe it's a region that had been subject to quite a lot of changes through the influence of foreign invasion and that Silk Road, all the mercantile interrelations between the Aryans and between different civilizations, if you want to call them that, the Mongols and so forth, that there must have been some type of cross-pollination in that tradition at some point. I don't think that, you see, even the non-Aryan ways of behavior, non-Aryan folk or non-Aryan traditions, they came from the Aryans at some point, or even from pre-Aryan white people. I will point out that, for example, the Turks, in the previous show, I pointed out that basically the founders of the Turks, the first Turks were called Asina or Asir, basically, or Ashina tribe.

And they, according to the official science, it's not some kind of suggestion from my part, from the official science, they were Scythians, they were white people, and they subjugated the Mongolian population and they, at some point, started to interbreed with the women. It's also proven that the Aryan genes, the Scythian genes, came from the father's side, not from the mother's side. Unfortunately, this created the quite dangerous Mongols, and they inherited the strong riding and military skills of the Scythians, that were very, very strong riders, very organized, very disciplined.

I will say top-notch Aryans, but unfortunately, they committed racial crime, they committed race mixing. Miscegenation. Yeah, but let's put it that way.

The Far Eastern Turks, maybe they mixed later in time than the people believe. My suggestion is that the last vestiges, is the word I believe, the last vestiges of Aryans were wiped out by the Mongols. But even in the Mongol elite, there are a lot of evidences that Genghis Khan was partially white, or some people even believe that he was 100% white.

His mother was, I forgot her name, of course, but his mother, the name of the woman literally means great-eyed, so with gray eye. Yeah, that's interesting. If I could just interject, you know, the guy named Tamerlane in Asia, he was also apparently a white-haired, gray-eyed guy, and he was like even more significant a political figure than Genghis Khan.

He had more territory at some point. He was quite genocidal type, I will compare him with Stalin or something. But at some point, he was quite good against the Turks, I believe.

As I mentioned before, the Europeans on the Balkans at some point, they didn't like the alliance, but at some point, Bulgarian empire was a white, they used mercenaries, Tartars, that could be white people, by the way, because I remember that a lot of them were called Tartars, but actually they were Cumans. And the Cumans, as I read, even the Wikipedia admits that the name of Cumans means pale and blond and white, and there are a lot of descriptions of the Cumans being called weak huns, because they were part of the huns. And even the German Mark Graf, so local nobleman, he admits that the Cumans were tall, with long blond mustaches, they were handsome, and liked by the women.

But he also called them Turks, so it looks like back in the time, the term Turk was used in a different way than the modern Turks, this is for sure. So, these Tartars with unknown origin, they were allied with the Bulgarian empire and they were used like a white cavalry and cavalry archers against the Turks. And in many cases, the Mongols were just better, or maybe not the Mongols, the Tartars were just better.

It looks like they were much more skillful horsemen, they were much smarter, and yeah, especially the second Timberlain, it's quite... And this Genghis that is very Mongol, it's maybe not a true representation. Because I've read that he had a reddish beard and maybe green eyes. But it doesn't matter, as I said before, a lot of Aryans at some point switched sides, like basically the British allied with the world Jewry.

And as I said before, we must research these things. And I'm pretty sure that Attila was a white man, just the sources out of the Roman narrative describe them like... Yeah, I've heard of that as well. Quite white, not this strange creature that was described not by Priscus, by the way, but by Jordanes, so centuries later.

So anyway, the Mongols or Tartars, as it's right to be named at that point, we're talking about late 14th century, they were like scorch for the Balkans. It's why, most likely from the Jewish propaganda, that the Tartars and the Mongols were never defeated. Volga Bulgaria managed to defeat the forces of Genghis at least once.

The forces, I forgot who was the Khan after Genghis, but they were also defeated. I think his name is Kublai Khan. Kublai, thank you.

And of course, the debunking of this battle as I said of the Battle of the Rams, which was quite famous. They tried to debunk it to say that it's basically some kind of misinformation or something like that. But it looks like there are some local sources and fairy tales that are based around that battle.

So the Volga Bulgarians managed to defeat a group that were retreating from Central Europe at some point, some of these riding parties. We don't know how large was that group and how important was the battle, but it looks it happened. I mean, one of these supposedly undefeatable Mongols was destroyed.

This happened during the last year of the rule of Ivan II, which was quite a strong Bulgarian tsar. But unfortunately, after his death, his descendants were quite, there was a quite struggle for the throne. And of course, the Mongols pushed quite hard in Central Eastern Europe.

Bulgaria was subjugated for a short period of time. Bulgarian empire was even a vassal of the Golden Horde. So it was a quite unpleasant experience, so to say.

A lot of people talk about destructions, a lot of people were fleeing for the fortresses and so on. The other thing that the historians didn't mention, or at least the mainstream historians didn't mention that, the European warrior, it looks like the heavy European horseman, and the Western variant is the knight, and the Eastern is cataphracts, or bagateer, or bugateer, or basically the same. Yeah, like Ilya Muromets and, what is it, Alyosha Popovich.

Those are the sort of like folk tale heroes. Yeah, I'm not sure about that. I mean, the Russian, what will be the... Some of these folk heroes, the Russians had the nasty habit of taking heroes from the tales of other people and pretending that they're their own heroes.

Anyway, let's put that thing on the side. But these heavily armed warriors, even fewer numbers, actually they managed to defeat, in hand-to-hand combat, the Mongols.

Unfortunately for Europeans, these heavily armed warriors at that period, we're talking about middle, let's say, 13th century, they were not so numerous.

But if you read the history, the Polish-German knights were quite successful, even though they were severely outnumbered. So, it looks like the history, and this is another point, the history is totally twisted, because they want to show the inferiority of the Europeans. But Europe, this period is quite important for us, because I'm talking about 13th century, because at that period, and 14th century, at that period Europe was attacked from three sides.

From the far east, the Tatars, from the south is the Turks, and the southwest was still holding the last bastions of the Arabs in Europe. So, Europe, this was it, and of course not to mention the Black Death, the plague. This caused enormous amount of casualties amongst our best people, I would say, and I will point out that most likely the Jews are behind that.

There are a lot of registered cases that are really not so, how the modern media try to present them, that back in the medieval period, the people were mindless, and they were fanatical Christians. There are a lot of, basically, detective works in the medieval and ancient period. People used their logic, and they obtained a lot of knowledge for the Jews.

And a lot of sources claim that the Jews were poisoning the wells, and this is all around, not only in Christian Europe, but this is all around the Middle East. The Arabs also claim that the Jewish merchants are poisoning the wells, including in the far east, in Persia, that the Persians caught a Jew from, I believe it was from China or something like that, some of these. So, he was following the Silk Road, and the Jew was poisoning the wells with some unknown substance.

And the horses start to, when they drank from the well, they start to have blood bleeding from there. Yeah, I think, you know, for the Black Plague, that was caused by some guy named Shabbatai Zvi, who was this sort of Kabbalistic Jew, who adhered to this notion that in order to make God react, he had to do as much harm as he possibly could in the world. And so, yeah, so they used a bunch of rats, plague rats, and they threw them into European cities and in the water supply, and that's how the Black Plague was spread.

I believe that in some cases, the fanatical Jews, I've read a case about a Jew that was infected with the Black Plague, because they have, what is the English word, ooze and puss from their, what is the word, for God's sake? Anyway, he was using his bodily fluids to spread the virus or the plague. Yeah, sounds like something that a Jew would do. Yeah, so it's kind of disgusting, people, but you can give them that in their fanatical hatred against us.

They use their, I would say, foot soldiers, the woe-tier Jews, and they sacrifice themselves to cause us enormous harm, and this works, actually, this works. But I am giving example with that period, because it was the darkest hour of Europe. It looks like Europe was attacked from three sides.

The population of Europe was destroyed by Black Plague, but at the same time, the strongest survived, and it looks like the Jews underestimate the Europeans at that point, at least the Western Europeans. The Eastern Europeans were subjugated in a series of infiltrations and very complicated political affairs. I believe I explained how the Bulgarian Empire was infiltrated on the highest level.

Basically, the Tsar Alexander married a Jew, a Jewess. Yeah, and the Mishling, actually, Ivan Shishman caused enormous harm, enormous harm, even though the modern historians try to present himself like a heroic fighter for the last ditch he tried to stand against the Jews and so on. So, in reality, nah, no.

He was either totally incompetent or he just did the Jewish work, which I believe there is some evidence for that. But anyway, I will make a parallel with the situation of the white race now and the situation of what was in the late 14th century. Yeah, it looks like what you're saying is having an impact because the Jews outside are banging away on the wall.

That's what they always do whenever they're getting all agitated. Yeah, I'm pretty sure that the Jews are celebrating their victory because it looks like they are not challenged for their power until that moment. But as I said before... No, I mean, in this conversation we're having that the Jews outside my window are banging away on the fence.

Usually, they do that when they're being exposed or when, you know, I'm having conversations about them. So, that shows that it's effective, right? So, you're living in an area with a lot of Jews or something? Yeah, in this town, it's like sort of what I call a Zionist enclave. They've got nothing but Zionist Christians and Jews.

They even had advertised for this town in like the New York Times or something because it's got energy independence, it's got farm independence, you know, it's got gas reserves underneath it. So, they use that as a safe space that they can hide away from all the problems that they cause. Supposedly, my hometown, Burgas, it was a place back in before the fall of Constantinople, it was headquarters of the Sanhedrin.

And at some point, I believe, one of the largest synagogues in Bulgaria is still here, by the way. But supposedly, most of the Jews migrated in 1946-1947 in Israel. Actually, they were stimulated to move in Israel.

And this doesn't mean that we don't have Jews here in Burgas, but official data said that in a town that is around 200,000, maybe 300,000 during the summer season, the official data claimed something like 200 Jews. But I suppose that there are more, like, I don't know how many Michelins live in Burgas, but let's say 1,000. Yeah, that's pretty good.

I know in this town, it's only about like 70 or so thousand people here, but they're all over the place. They control every business, every government position. They have staff basically monopolizing all the government functions, all positions of power, basically.

They have total control of it. Then they have this power because of the Christians. Because the Christians worship them, so they give them all the power, basically.

Yeah, here it's a little bit better. I mean, the Orthodox Christianity, I'm not the biggest fan, as you know, but they keep, in most of the cases, of course, they keep a realistic understanding of what is the nature of the Jew. Yeah, that's good.

Yeah, this is the closest thing that I can say because of the EU wars or something like that. Some people were much more... I knew, for example, I believe that the guy passed away years ago, but I knew a guy that was a teacher in a Sunday school and he was a member of the Bulgarian National Legion, so this was the organization of General Hristolukov. Of course, this means that they are considered by the communists, including to the modern communists, to be national socialist sympathizers, fascists, anti-Semites, and so on and so forth.

So, anyway... It's the best you can get for Christianity, anyway. Yeah, yeah. My point was that this guy, he was sent to a communist concentration camp and he has a lot of difficulties in life after that because, supposedly, after the death of Stalin, they started to close the concentration camp, but in reality, it never happened.

They just transformed the concentration camps in other forms. But, anyway, the point was that he, after the so-called fall of communism, never fall, the communism is still here, unfortunately, but after the so-called fall of communism in 1989, he started to... He created the Sunday schools and I remember in the late 90s, so I was 16 or 17, something like that, I met him and some of his followers, so to say, and he had some interesting theory about Hitler being sent by Rabbi Yeshu, basically, and he was, according to his idea, Hitler was the prophesied saint that was sent to fight the beast, which according to him was the world jury, of course, and he was, for some period of time, had some following, but I believe his movement was infiltrated and, of course, he was kicked out from the Bulgarian Orthodox Church, because they are full of communist agents and so on and so forth, because during the liturgy he mentioned the names... So, basically, the liturgy was... Because there are some dates that they mentioned the fallen warriors that were defending the skies of Bulgaria in the Second World War, and he mentioned Bulgarian pilots, he mentioned the German pilots, and this was okay, of course, Bulgaria and Germany were allied at that point, they were fighting the Brits and Americans, but the big problem was when he mentioned, I believe, Göring, and because, of course, he was a commander-in-chief of the Luftwaffe, so it was normal to mention Göring, so it was a big fuss that he mentioned that he wishes Göring to rest in peace and blah, blah, blah.

So, he was kicked out of the Bulgarian Orthodox Church, and I believe that his followers, his movement was infiltrated and scattered, but this is just an example how some people in the Orthodox Church is kind of a little bit better than the rest of the corrupt scumbags.

Yeah, well, especially if you're dealing with Zionist Christians like the ones around here, they're pretty much the most hateful people I've ever seen in my entire life. Even before they knew who I was here, they always had this sort of hostile attitude, just, you know, this judgment like you're a devil or a demon or something just for no reason, just sort of staring at you and, you know... Because you're against the holy... Oh, no, before they even knew that, just as soon as I showed up in the place, you know, you have this sort of arrogant, judgmental, hostile attitude that they all have, just by looking at you, you know, like they don't have any friendliness toward white people at all. So, anyway, so this was the more or less the... Most of the... Contrary to the Russian propaganda, the Orthodox Church is everywhere heavily infiltrated, corrupt.

There was a case years ago, I believe six, seven years ago, of... They discovered a homosexual network in the Bulgarian monasteries and they were hiring male prostitutes, gypsy male prostitutes, by the way. Yeah, that's probably why these Christians like their minorities, their non-whites so much. They serve as their, like, sex toys, basically.

Yeah, yeah, it's a very easy way for these homosexuals to obtain sex, an easy lifestyle, because they have the respect, they have nice salaries. Yeah, it's like their slave class, their sex slave class. Yeah, yeah.

So, this is the Orthodox Church, not to mention that during the time of the communist regime, of course, there are prosecutions against them, but a lot of people actually are white with the communists and they became agents of the regime. And a lot of these people, high-ranking priests, patriots and so on, they were used like agents of the national security and indirectly by KGB. The case in Russia, for example, is that the Patriarch is obviously a KGB agent.

He likes very expensive watches, like $100,000 plus watches, and he's famous with very expensive taste in limousines and dresses and so on. So, very holy man, obviously. In our case in Bulgaria, we also have similar corrupt comebacks.

Is the Orthodox Church, is that based out of Russia, like the centralized power center of it? No, no. Whereabouts is that based out of? Technically, the Patriarch Churches, I mean, they're ruled by Patriarchs. So, theoretically, they're autonomous churches.

They're not centralized around any power. The most prestigious church, supposedly, must be the Patriarch in Constantinople. But because Constantinople is placed in Turkey, Turkey is not in majority, at least, it's not a Christian country and definitely not Orthodox Christian country.

The most powerful, actually, in reality, the most powerful church and backed by the state is the Russian, obviously. But in theory, they're equal. Russian Patriarch and Bulgarian Patriarch are equals.

And not to mention that the symbolic, it's just a symbolic title, how would it be translated, basically, the Patriarch of the Universe, the Vsevolodskiy Patriarch. It is in Constantinople. And he very often is decided by typical Semitic or, if you want, Christian intrigues.

And behind these intrigues, very often, are the Russians. Because they found that the church is a very useful instrument for influencing the stupid government. Back in 2015, the Ukrainian Secret Service found letters, they managed to broke the code of one of the, actually, he was, this guy that they broke the code, he was subordinate of Dugin.

Dugin and some other Russian Bolsheviks, basically, they founded the so-called Byzantine group. And in that Byzantine group, they're trying to renovate the Byzantine Empire, of course, with the center, Moscow. And this is also part of the plan of this Eurasian idea.

Because if you create this Eurasian idea, you basically have the Byzantine Empire, right? So, this guy, the Ukrainian Service managed to broke the code. And this guy, obviously, was spreading influence and money in the Bulgarian Orthodox Church. And they were sending letters to, he was sending letters to different high-ranking monks, priests, that were supposedly preferable by Russia.

And they were known as Russophiles. So, they were discussing who would be the best for Russia to be a Bulgarian patriot. So, yeah, and it didn't change anything.

I mean, the guy that was elected for Patriarch, obviously, was elected with the money influence of Russia. And that's why a lot of these Orthodox pro-Russian, actually. And I believe this instrument was used by the Russians, the Christianity, the Orthodox Christianity, and so and so, was used even in Western Europe.

A lot of nationalists in Western European countries and America believe that Russia is this heaven for white people. And one of the reasons is that they're so based and they like Rabbi Yeshu so much, they're building churches left and right. And even the Russian nationalists are joking about that, that they're spending enormous amount of money for churches, not for schools and hospitals.

And this is because the electorate of Putin, elderly women, interestingly enough, communists, most of them, in reality, Bolshevik communists that are quite unhappy with the fall of USSR, but also at the same time, they're Orthodox, which is quite interesting if you think about it, because the Orthodox Christianity was kind of suppressed during the time of communism. They didn't totally eliminate it, though. They just kept it around as like a means of persecuting people so that they could bind them to the church to a greater extent, probably.

That's probably why they did that, you know, because they had the power to eliminate Christianity if they really wanted to. My suggestion is that the first wave of Jewish Bolsheviks, they just wanted to create their own version of, modern version of Middle Eastern occult religion. That's why you have the mummies of Lenin and Stalin and you have basically Zikurats, because on the Red Square you have Zikurats of Lenin, basically these ancient Middle Eastern pyramids.

And they also were very interested in the occultism and the Far East. And there are a lot of good documentaries in Russian and in Bulgarian that are revealing how in the early 20s, basically until Stalin came to power, in the early 20s, USSR was spending enormous amount of money in researching of different occult questions. Yeah.

Have you ever seen that video footage of Nina Kalugina, the person who apparently was a Ukrainian who could use telekinesis to move physical objects around? They had video footage of her. No, no, I don't know her. But yeah, they've got all sorts of stuff like the Kirlian photography and what else did they have? They used the woodpecker signal, you know, to mind control people.

Yeah, I know about some of the experiments. So anyway, at some point, these ideas, these occult ideas, the Jews and different crypto occultists and crypto masons were kicked out when Stalin came and he started to push his different way of Jewish Bolshevism. He's much more pragmatic, much more imperialistic and much more brutal.

I mean, I don't mean that the Jews before Stalin were not brutal, but let's say that they had the tendency to follow the typical Jewish degenerate ways, which if you Google transgender weddings or homosexual weddings in USSR, you'll find some quite interesting things. The first homosexual wedding was in 1990 or 1980 or something like that. There were a lot of strange degenerate cases during the time of USSR.

Yeah, it was just like an experimental time period for the Jews to manipulate the population, you know, to see what they could do in the Western world to try to build their power in the Eastern bloc. And then from there, you know, use cultural Marxism in the Western civilization so that they could use their technologies that they developed in the Eastern bloc in large part in the Western world. I think that they're just following their nature and their degenerates.

But at some point, the other more rational Jews and more, or Shabbats go, it depends how you look at Stalin, they realized, he realized that if you allow this kind of degenerates to multiply in Russia, they cannot subjugate the West because he wanted to subjugate Europe by power. Now, this is known by a lot of serious historians that the Russians had the plan basically to overrun Germany for something like two weeks or something. And they wanted to enter Paris at the end of the first month.

And they even had these quite, let's say, over optimistic ideas to enter the Middle East at the end of the sixth month of war and to capture, I believe, North Africa after a year or something. So they were aiming at total global domination. At the same time, and I believe that we diverge from the original topic, but at the same time, they were planning to create a Jewish state in the Middle East and this Jewish state will be a very important, basically, a republic in the USSR.

This global plan of creating this pan, it's not even a pan-Asia, it will be pan-Euro-Asiatic-Africanic alliance of communist republics. Well, I'm sure their ultimate intention is just global dominion. Yeah.

That was just like an intermediary phase. And that's why they were actually training Jews in a different, I'll say, techniques of war and sabotage and basically dirty Jewish techniques of infiltration and terrorist activities. One of these guys that were trained was Markov Feldman or Fredman, I forgot the name.

So a Jew, a Bulgarian Jew, he was a leader of the military wing of the Bulgarian Communist Party. And you can find that one of the largest terrorist acts in the early 20th century was in Bulgaria. It was the bombing of Saint... Basically, I believe the translation must be Saint King.

I will try to find the article and see what... Yeah. So basically, it's called the Saint Nedelia Church Assault. It's a Wikipedia article, so you can imagine what kind of bullshit will be there.

But the Saint Nedelia Church Assault was a terrorist attack on Saint Nedelia Church in Sofia, Bulgaria. It was carried on the 16th of April 1925, when a group of Bulgarian Communist Party blew up the church roof during the funeral service of General Konstantin Georgiev, who had been killed in the previous communist assault on 14th of April. So basically, the Jews from the money and the organization of this assault came from USSR or Jewish SSR.

And the plan was to kill the elite of Bulgaria to create a revolutionary situation, and basically from USSR groups of communists and Jews, which is basically the same, will be sent in Bulgaria and create a revolutionary situation. But they first killed the general, then the funeral of the general will attract, of course, the military and social elite of Bulgaria. A lot of people will go there and they will kill them all with the one single bomb attack.

They even planted a large reservoir with acid under the roof, so when the bomb blew up, this acid caused enormous amount of harm among the victims. And of course, because I've started to reveal what is the nature of Christianity, the guy that was, what is the correct, he was not a priest, but he was basically taking care for the bells of the church. So he was corrupt.

They spent the money on him and he showed the communists the way to where they could plant a bomb and where they could create these enormous terrorist attacks. So let's continue. After the failure of the September uprising in 1923, the prohibition of the Bulgarian Communist Party by the Bulgarian Supreme Court of Appeal on the 2nd of April 1924, the Communist Party found itself in a difficult situation.

By the way, my great-grandfather, he was an officer, and he led one of the military units that were fighting these communist scumbags in 1923. Did you say he left them? I didn't really hear what you said there. He was a commander of one of the anti-communist units.

So I guess that's your pedigree, that you're definitely, in your blood memory, you're definitely a nationalist. Yeah, I don't know. I cannot imagine that I could have some globalist and pro-communist ideas.

I mean, I've read the diaries of my great-grandfather, and he was a fervent nationalist, and he fought the First World War. Because they captured, Bulgarians fought against the Russians on the Balkans and in Romania, and they captured Russian officers, and the Russian officers told them what the Jews, they were quite open that the Bolsheviks are basically Jews, are doing in Russia. And he was very, very shocked, very shocked.

And he was afraid that this is coming to Bulgaria. And unfortunately, he was alive when the communists took power in Bulgaria in 1944. For a short period of time, he was alive.

He basically didn't, he saw what they'd done with our family in Bulgaria, and he received a heart attack. So anyway, where was I? Anyway, the government arrested many activists, terrorists basically, and the organization's very existence was under threat. The special punitive group was established as a part of the central committee of the BCP.

So punitive group is a very complicated Jew term for terrorist group, including Yanko Dursiev, Captain Ivan Minkov, and Volko Chervenkov. Volko Chervenkov was head of the Bulgarian state after 1944. And he was, by the way, executed by other communists after that.

The military organization of the Bulgarian Communist Party was led by Minko and Major Kostya Yankov, set up in small groups called Shestorki, or Shestorki that carried the individual attacks. So basically, there were, again, Jewish symbolic number, group of six. This, however, did not prevent the police from discovering and destroying the legal structures of the Bulgarian Communist Party.

By the way, the Bulgarian police, at least the chiefs of Bulgarian police at that point, they've studied in Italy, in fascist Italy, and they didn't like communism. Especially, some other time I will tell the story about some of the actions of Bulgarian secret service against the communists, and they were quite effective. The communism never was very popular in Bulgaria until 1944.

And let's continue. So, this, however, didn't prevent the police from discovering and destroying the legal structures of the organization. Later, in December 1924, the organization recruited Petar Zadgorski.

By the way, some of these guys that I mentioned, they have Bulgarian names, but some of them are Jews. I guess you don't find it too difficult for the Mishlings in Bulgaria. Do you think it's easy to spot them, those who are Jewish or crypto-Jews? Well, let's put it that way.

Back in the time before 1944, it was almost unheard of mixing between Bulgarians and Jews or whatever other scumbags we have here. But after 1944, there was basically a power vacuum. The communists killed, at least officially, they claimed that they killed 33,000 men, of course, 33,000 is a kabbalistic number and a sacrifice to Yahweh or whatever.

But in reality, they killed at least 100,000 men. And at least 1 million, in one way or another, were prosecuted and were sent to different concentration camps and so on. Of course, some people argue about the number, but we had at some point something like 130 concentration camps in Bulgaria.

Of course, they were not called that they're concentration camps. They said that they are, for example, schools for dealing with unruly children. But these unruly children very often were descendants of people that were executed by the communists and so on.

So they had some their idea how to deal with the enemy of communism. So, for example, my family were called ex-human beings. Ex-human? Yeah.

So, in other words, they become dehumanized. Yes. Yes.

And that's what they're doing everywhere with white people, in every place they have power. Anybody who's pro-white is a dehumanized person. That's the way they treat me here in this town, all these Christian nuts.

Like everywhere I go, I see them like staring at me with this hostile look and so forth. This is just the first phase. I mean, before dehumanization, this is the first phase.

And the second phase is, well, if you're not human, or at least if you're not equal with equal rights with the other so-called humans, what will happen with you? I mean, that's why in the Jewish movies, the enemies are always these evil Germans or whatever, that they all always have the same uniforms. They're faceless. In many cases, they're faceless.

And they're always shouting and they're not human. They don't have human emotions. So it is easier for the mindless goyim watchers to dissociate with the Germans and associate with some Jewish communist comeback that is killing the Germans in many cases quite brutally.

Yeah, I can definitely see them getting to that point in this country, too. People here are totally sovietized in their mentality. Totally sarcastic and false people.

So definitely time to leave, time to get out of this country. Yes, that's why I was proposing my idea. Of course, it won't be some miracle solution or we can't say white heaven.

No, there's no heaven on this earth. My idea was to use the situation in Bulgaria, at least the situation until that moment, until this moment, that we have a lot of cheap ones. The climate is quite nice.

And for people with, let's say, a certain amount of money on the side, it will be much easier to buy houses and to establish families here. Not to mention that if you obtain a Bulgarian citizenship, they're becoming, of course, citizens of European Union. They could move all around Europe.

And my suspicion is that, of course, this situation with the cheaper ones and cheaper estates will not be for very long, maybe for the next five, six years, something like that. Because we will adopt the fucking euro, maybe after three or four years, and this will cause a rise in the prices of the estates. So maybe this is the moment, basically.

And we have a precedent, let's say, that our brother from America is quite determined to come to Bulgaria and to establish a family here and to help us in our idea to establish a white nationalist community in Bulgaria. So we will, let's say, keep the listeners informed about the ways how they could, if they're interested, of course, how they could obtain Bulgarian citizenship and what are the legal procedures. It's totally legal procedure, by the way, just saying, for some agents from Canada, from America, from Bulgaria or whatever, it's totally legal procedure.

We are not trafficking people, as I said before. And, yeah, it will be much better for people, white nationalists to live here than to be prosecuted, beaten by some groups of savage apes on the streets of America, for example. Yeah.

And, yeah, as I said before, Bulgaria is not a totally based place. It's not some kind of heaven. We have our problems, as I said, the world trade, quite a lot of non-whites.

But we have examples of Western Europeans and Americans and even Australians that are coming to Bulgaria, integrating quite well in Bulgarian society or building their settlements in Bulgaria, because it's much cheaper than the rest of Europe. The climate is very nice. And I would say that Bulgarians as a whole are quite friendly people.

Yeah, I've noticed that, you know, Canadians, for example, are much more frosty and standoffish a group of people than, and even sort of nasty people, than a lot of the Europeans that I've encountered. Why is that, by the way? I'm not too sure. I think it's just a climate of the, you know, the cultural climate of Canada.

It's based around, you know, that sort of virtue signaling about multiculturalism, that they're also so friendly toward anybody who isn't white, but anybody who is white, you know, they're not really generally the most friendly people. It might have something to do with the weather, too. I'm not too sure.

It might have something to do with the British dominionism and the influence of that sort of culture. It's pretty uptight and very inhibited place. People here are just sort of, you know, they have a very false personality.

So it's not very easy to really deal with them. Where is this more common? I mean, in English speaking areas or in the French speaking areas? That would be in the English speaking, I guess in Quebec, it's quite a different culture there. But that's only a comparatively small culture or region of the country, you know, just mainly confined to Quebec itself.

Pretty much all the rest of the country is just a sort of Anglo type culture, I guess you could call it. Even though it's overrun by non-whites, pretty much everywhere you go. I mean, this is because we talked about that thing in the past.

This is not only in the big cities, but all over Canada. Well, in the smaller places, it is not as much, obviously, but they just keep pumping them in anyway. So there's always a continual influx.

I think it is statistically about 330,000 officially, plus 300 or some thousand students and then the unofficial numbers. So they're bringing in about, I estimate probably at the very least 700,000 a year in this country. So that's basically population replacement in overdrive, because I'm not too sure how many white people live in this country.

If we take the baby boomers, there are probably at least half the population of whites. And I think there was like 30 or so million people here in this country that were white, something like that. So maybe let's just pretend that 20 million are white people who are younger.

Well, then that's how many who are not white. I don't even know statistically what it is now, but probably I would say young white people are probably like maybe 30 to 40 percent of this country. So it's pretty dismal in terms of demographic numbers.

So it's like basically all over the white world. Yeah, pretty much. Here, the only advantage of Canada is that there's just not as many people and there's a much larger land mass.

But in order to actually buy property here and to obtain employment and so forth, if you're white, then it's much more difficult. Unless you're well connected. Let's put it that way.

Without disclosing the personality, I have a close friend that moved from Europe to Canada and he didn't know how much money and how much effort it will cost him to establish, how to say, a place for his family. And it looks like it costs him an enormous amount of money and effort. But he's out of the big city.

So at least this is going for him. Let's put it that way. Well, if you were to try to get into the larger cities or even, you know, just a small city, then the prices would be exorbitant in terms of cost.

I'm not too sure what it is on average for the average house price in this country. I think it's something like $150,000 to $200,000 just for a crappy little two bedroom house or something like that. Yeah, I've heard that if you're building a house, we're talking about close to a million something like that.

Yeah, it's pretty ridiculous. And why would you want to come here to freeze to death half the year? Because the winters are at least five months out of the year, if not six months out of the year. Yeah, we're talking about polar weather there, I suppose.

Yeah, it's pretty much 20 degrees Celsius on average, I'd say 15 to 25 degrees below Celsius. So it's really not a very appealing place to live. There's really nothing to say for it.

Let's put it that way. In Bulgaria, we also have cold weathers, cold winters, but it's kind of rare. I mean, especially back in the time when I was young, I remember quite harsh weather.

I'm not a proponent of the global warming and other bullshit, of course, but I don't know. It looks like the weather is kind of softer these days. And especially in Bulgaria, the city that I live in, it's very soft.

I mean, the weather is not even a real winter if you compare it especially with Canada. But winter is around one month, and this is January, maybe February, maybe eventually March, but a very short period. And the weather is quite soft.

Actually, our American friend compared Bulgaria with California because he is born in California, and he said that literally Bulgaria is like California with white people. That's pretty good. So what is the coldest temperature on average that it gets to during the winter months in Celsius? Where? Where you are.

I must look what is the average temperature in Bulgaria, but I suppose it's not a minus. It's something like... So let's put average temperature. Yeah, I was just going to look that up myself.

Bulgarian climate average temperature. Let's put that except... So the peak is... We're reaching something like 25, 26 degrees Celsius, 28 degrees Celsius during the July, August, and it's dropping, of course, in September, October. So the average is positive.

So basically, 13 degrees Celsius, 13.2 degrees Celsius, and in Fahrenheit, it's 55 degrees, 0.7. So basically, you could live there all year round with just a thermal sleeping bag. You wouldn't even need to have heat. Yeah, but take in mind that the authorities won't allow you to live in a sleeping bag, most likely.

In Burgas, at least. But take in mind that Burgas is next to the sea, and this is more or less the case. But in the inner parts of Bulgaria, we're talking about mountains, and the weather there could be quite different.

But still, it won't be minus 25 degrees most of the time. It will be minus 5, minus 7, but it won't be for so long period of time. Yeah, even that though, people could still live in a... They could still live without heat if there were an emergency situation.

You could have a thermal sleeping bag and just, you know, survive. Yeah, yeah, yeah. Let's put it that way.

The weather... Back in the time, in the Roman Empire, the Bulgaria was... The Trajan Valley, so to say, that is in Bulgaria, was one of the bread baskets of the Roman Empire. Of course, much smaller bread basket than Egypt, but still one of the there was thermae or therma, so hot water. One of the advantages that I didn't mention in Bulgaria, we have quite cheap water.

So basically, quite cheap resources that are very basic, but after maybe 10 years or after the total domination of the apes in Western Europe, you will find out that very basic things like food and water and women will be quite hard to obtain. So let's look at that direction. I'm not saying that only Bulgaria is, how to say, this perfect place for settling, but look at the East, look at the Eastern Europe.

I believe that, as I said before, Eastern Europe was the source of origin of the Indo-Europeans. They spread it all over the world and maybe we must go to the topic of the Aryan culture and traditions, but I believe that the last and hopefully the successful, I'd say, pushback of the Aryans will be in Eastern Europe. Because of many things, because of the people more or less here, less brainwashed, not exactly perfect situation, because there are a lot of ways that the Jews influence even people that are more or less conservative, but let's put it that way.

Average Bulgarians don't like homosexuals. Average Bulgarians don't like and totally discussed by homosexual weddings. Average Bulgarians don't like gypsies, don't like Turks, and until recently they didn't like Negroes marrying for white women.

Now, I don't know about younger generation, my friends here in Bulgaria try to convince me that they're totally brainwashed by the liberal communist media. Maybe I'm not right, I mean I'm older and I think quite differently, but still the people don't like these things, these abominations. They didn't do jack shit against them, but they don't like them.

So, maybe if there's a way to show the people other ways of behavior, they could follow, especially if they're pushed from some outer force, so to say. Yeah, well, that's basically the only option they're going to have anyway because of the trajectory of the circumstances of what's going on in this world. They're going to have to form parallel societies in a community of their own and that way if everything's set up in advance, then they can have that option.

That way it sort of prepares it in advance. There are some movements in that direction in Bulgaria. I mean, my comrades visited some alternative lifestyle settlements, but unfortunately they're more or less based around new age ideas.

But people, they see the consequences of the Jewish civilization or so-called civilization and they don't like to live in such conditions. They don't like to live in the They don't like to be, basically, they want to be independent. So, independence more or less means that you must leave the city and have land.

Yeah, it's a very natural thing if you think about it because, well, one of the major steps that communists did in the past was to take the land of the people. And this caused, I'll say, urbanization. The communists wanted to create a proletariat.

They wanted to create these big cities and to build factories around the big cities and the pros, so basically proletarians, will be dependent on them. And this caused a lot of villages and most of the population of Bulgaria lived in villages until 1944. But when you take the land of the people, when you take the cattle, when you take all means of production, because of some ugly homosexual Jew like Karl Marx and his twisted ideas, when you take all means of production, when you take the land, the population don't have other chance than to move to the big cities.

And they work in the factories, they receive salary and they're totally dependent from their communist masters, which, by the way, is the case in Western Europe. Yeah, pretty much everybody's dependent on the big agri-corporations. They don't have independent farmland anymore and they used to have their own communities and their own dairies and everything else, but now they're just forced into wage slavery, basically.

And this process will be even accelerated because all over first world countries in Europe and the United States, we are hearing different attempts to establish a base income. And the base income, including the Jufu, the coronavirus, was also a kind of push in that direction because you received, I mean, not you, Americans received what was $1,200 or something like that. Well, that's what they claim anyway.

I'm pretty sure most people never even got that. Yeah, could be true. I don't know.

I spoke with a couple of our American comrades and I believe they also said that some guys didn't receive the money. But anyway, this is also part of their plan, obviously, because you receive the money if you behave like a good guy. Yeah.

And also, this will cause inflation. Also, this will cause, basically, I believe that the free money won't be enough for a normal white family in America or Canada, but it will be more than enough for Negroes and other non-whites and they will multiply, like they did in Bulgaria with the gypsies and the social money that they received. They basically tripled or even quadrupled their population for a period of 80 years.

Not even quadrupled. What is the term? From 20,000, they are 1,200,000. I think it's quintuple, times five.

Quintuple. Maybe this is more adequate. So, we have something like 60 times their number for a period of 80 years.

So, yeah, they are like rats, basically. Pretty much, yeah. Yeah.

So, this base income will be just another step in the total global communism that actually is pushed by the Jews, because in their nature, they're communists. Well, in their nature, they're control freaks who want to control every facet of human life. Of course.

And that's basically what communism is. It's just a totalitarian system of slavery that everything is controlled in a centralized government. Yeah, because their God is a totalitarian control freak.

You must make a difference between authoritarian systems that are typical for the Aryans and totalitarian system of the Semites. Yeah. Julius Evola, he distinguished between the two, calling one an anagogic system and the other one a catagogic system.

One of them, catagogic, is breaking down from the Greek kata, and ana is building up. So, the Aryan is building up and the Jew is breaking down. Their system is inherently self-destructive.

It's catagogic totalitarianism. Yeah, because if you look, if we use the Christian terms, their system is satanic. They're satanic towards the nature and the natural order of things.

They are self-destructing, but they have a very unpleasant, how to say, not quality, vice, maybe vice is the correct term, to destroy everything around them and to twist and to mutate, basically, even the most noble qualities of other people. They use the, how to say, the nature of the white man to, we seek justice, we seek order, we seek, how to say, to create goodness. And they use it, the Jews use these qualities, and they turn these qualities against us.

Because I cannot imagine how these, I always think about these German guys that establish community, quite prosperous community, in Bulgaria. What the fuck are they doing in Togumen, I mean, in Central Africa? It's not a good place for white men. And why, what are they expecting? I mean, they didn't say that they didn't like Africa, but in reality, they escaped Africa.

They escaped Africa, they admitted that it was not a healthy place for white men, that they all started to starve and to have diseases. And they built hospitals, they built orphanages, they built, they, these Negroes, they didn't even have, they didn't have normal roads, so they made, they built roads for them. And why all this energy, all this money, I suppose, they also spent money there.

This could be investing in a much more noble endeavor to build a settlement for white people here in Bulgaria. But of course, these people are not racialsists. I mean, this is, this is the best.

Yeah, that's probably why they took that route, because they wanted to do something that accorded with popular morality, this sort of virtue signaling type thing. It's considered to be popular to be a race traitor. So they decided to do that so they could brag to their friends back home about how they were helping the innocent Negroes and so forth.

You know, these new age types that supposedly there's some kind of counter culture, but in reality, they're not counter culture. They're just a mutation, a radical mutation of the dominant culture, which is, which is more, it's a joke. I mean, what, how? It's all, it's all, it's all egalitarianism, whether it's Christian or it's liberal, it doesn't really matter.

It's the same thing. Everything's equal, you know, worship the Jews or never criticize Jews, let them do whatever they want and then make sure your race mix and you, you know, go out of your way to give everything away to those who aren't white and attack your own race, deny the existence of your own race, be anti-white. Yeah.

Yeah. I mean, these, whatever, you know, that of course a lot of people will be triggered, but whatever, this is true. You know, that Christianity on the core is basically anti-natural.

It's not natural. And of course it's very Judaic and it's communism. A lot of communists, when they read the Bible, they said that it's basically the same with the ideas of communism.

Yeah. I remember talking to this one guy, I remember talking to this one guy recently, he was like a Freemason and a Mormon and he was saying, Oh, what's wrong with communism? Well, I wonder. So, so it's, it's a sick ideas that came out of sick minds and I will, my suspicion is that we will, we will see more from these degenerate ideas.

I mean, uh, for now we are not able to strike a blow against one of, even one of the heads of these Jewish hydra. And in ancient myths, and let's make this soft transition to the mythological part and traditional part. In the ancient myths, the hero being a Hercules or being the Heros or Herios, being a Thor or being a horse in the Bulgarian variant, the ancient hero managed to kill with one strike, the mighty creature.

And with one strike, the hero managed to cut all the heads of the hydra. So we must figure out how to kill with one strike the heads of the hydra, because the hydra is attacking us from every side and direction. They're creating feminism and this is causing havoc, including in my life in some way or another.

They're creating emancipation of the non-whites. And so we're basically observing this process and we're being hunted down. Our kinsmen are being hunted down on the streets of American cities, streets that they built, actually, not these Negroes and Jews, LARPing like Antifa or something like that.

The white man built these cities and now the white man is hunted down in the same cities. Well, it's the same as in the African colonies during the decolonization period when they started kicking out and murdering the white people there. That's just what they're doing right now.

That's a transition that they're heading into at a rapid pace with this Black Lives Matter and the whole thing, the whole agenda. Of course, of course. Look how they're covering their intention, their true goal of destroying the white people, destroying the white race.

They cover it with a positive message, right? Black Lives Matter, not kill white people, right? Black Lives Matter. Yeah, that's the sort of rhetorical inversion that they use to portray themselves as victims so that they can justify doing whatever they want. It's more or less the same with the first Christians, if you think about it, how they invented this idea of martyrdom.

So, they'll become even more powerful when they're prosecuted. So, it's not an Aryan idea. The Aryan idea, the Aryan tradition is the heroism.

We always were following examples. I had argued back in the time what was the traditional Aryan view because they said that National Socialism was not Aryan in the sense that it was social and I'll say it was a reference to the social elements of being a group idea, political movement. Collectivistic.

Yeah, collectivistic. But it's also the guys that tried to debunk me because I said that it's the very Aryan idea. Also, they forget that the people that lived before the Christianization, before these globalistic empires like the Roman Empires, they had social structure.

They had caste system, of course, but these social structures, they were self-sustaining social structures. And they were in some way socialistic because I've read about the Germans, but also about all Bulgarians and maybe there's a similar situation about Celts, that the people that were, for example, lowest in the lowest caste, so to say, that must feed the rest of the, for example, the military caste or the priesthood and so on. So, they would help with obtaining land and they would help with working the land, basically.

So, there were some social elements even in the ancient times. They were not so these, how the Jews want to explain that, they were totally subjugated and totally slaves of the aristocrats or whatever. I believe that this slave mentality, this, how to say, fixed caste system came with Christianity because Christianity established this fixed stable pyramid-like structure like the priesthood, aristocracy.

Basically, there is no movement between the different castes. The aristocracy is fixed and this is very much, this gave them advantages. At some point, the aristocracy started to mix with the Jews because it was not very profitable to have a lot of wars and you need money and who has the money? The Jews have the money and they have the money because they're the only group that were not prohibited of giving wars and the Christians were prohibited of giving wars and so on.

So, basically, the church destroyed the competitions of the Jews which, in my opinion, was obviously one of the goals of Christianity, maybe not the main goal. The main goal was changing the psychological archetype of the Aryan people from being dominant imperial, let's say, imperialist or warriors and conquerors and explorers to passive, feminized, to civilized, to, how to say, degenerate mass of people that even being a white by blood, they are not Aryans by behavior and culture. Yeah, just basically like their soul had been polluted.

Yeah, yeah. And I mentioned before that in the Bulgarian myths, the first gate that is the main gate of the white city of Bulgaria or Belgrade or whatever, the city of the gods, the first gate is blood, but the second is rasum. So, the first is krov or krav, which is blood, the second is rasum, which is mind.

And we don't know the last. And as I said, the final gate is anger. So, the battle rage, anger.

And as I said before, we must keep our blood and we must protect our mind because this is how the things work. And I will say that the rasum, the mind, is more important. Let's say not more important than the blood, but it's important to protect your blood because you use your mind to outsmart the enemy.

And that's why, by the way, I refer to your name. There was an element in the Aryan myths of the trickster. Oh, yeah.

He's referring to Loki, just in case people don't know. Yeah, yeah. Some people, this started with Stefan, if you know Stefan from Julian.

Yeah, he started this quite stupid theory that Loki is Jehovah and Satan and whatever, which is not true. Just saying that this is not true. Loki was an archetypal trickster.

And if you look at different mythologies of the Aryan people, including Greeks, for example, Odysseus, he was a trickster character. Not being less Aryan, by the way, just saying that we need to adopt some of the qualities of the trickster because we cannot fight in an open battle when we are totally outgunned and outnumbered and we don't have the upper hand in the technology department. We must outsmart our enemies.

And I believe that Loki was able to change his outlook, to present himself with different faces. Am I right? Yeah, he was actually, I think, associated with androgyny too. He was a shapeshifter.

He could transform into different shapes in some of the myths and that way he achieved his objectives of creating changes. That's the way I look upon Loki, as sort of like a catalyst of change, basically. Well, I will refer to, for example, the myth of creation in Bulgarian mythology, that the cosmic spirit, the thunder god, the sky god, Tangrum, came to his avatar in the material world, Tangrum, and he decided to outsmart the Demiurge god, basically Jehovah, not to fight him in open battle because he knew that he will lose the battle.

He decided to use the weaknesses of the Demiurge, which is greed and pride. If you remember the story, he just started to, I would say, to ignite his pride and his greed and he tried to provoke him to open his mouth as wide as possible and then he stroked deep in his mouth. Which, by the way, maybe there is a sum because I believe that our forefathers knew what is coming and they tried to cipher messages in the stories of our people.

Maybe this was the work of shamans, maybe this was some kind of subconscious, I don't know, subconscious way of seeing the future. I just don't know the English words to describe that. I believe that our forefathers sent us messages through our myths and that's why, in many cases, Christianity and other Jewish anti-cultures basically, they tried to destroy the pagan knowledge, the pagan wisdom, including songs, including rituals, including traditions, including worldview.

They are destroying our knowledge because they knew that this is the way for our people to liberate ourselves from the Jewish demiurge and from the Jews as a whole. For example, one of the archetypal myths of the Aryans is the world tree. Now, the world tree is growing, even in the ancient Greek myths, it's growing from chaos and passing through Tartarus, or underworld.

And it's, of course, at some point, usually in the center, according to the Greeks, the center of the world is the place where the world tree is growing in our dimension. And the crown of the tree is in the realm of the gods. Now, in the case of the, I believe, in Norse mythology, it was the same story.

You have Yggdrasil and Yggdrasil, the roots of Yggdrasil. I believe in one of the stories that I've read, this world serpent, Jormungandr, is biting the roots of Yggdrasil and poisoning the roots of Yggdrasil, which, by the way, is another allegory with the Jewish snake. And the trunk, I think they call that Leviathan.

Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah. By the way, just saying that in the Bible, I know that the Christat will say that Yahweh was described how he was killing Leviathan, right? But Yahweh is Leviathan. But at the same time, he is described of having quite, I would say, serpentine qualities.

And also not to mention that the priesthood of the Yahweh is named what was Cohen and Levite, right? Which are basically, I believe, in Hebrew, this means a snake, right? So of course, you have the Jews with their Shekinah, the Shekinah glory, the feminine principle of God. And then they've got the serpents on their hair, you know, those sort of curls. Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.

Not to mention that, I believe, Moses used this totem of Yahweh being a snake, right? And the angels of Yahweh has these burning snake names, like what was the name, basically? Archangels and Cheruvims. So basically, this is another burning, but also means burning like snake. And not to mention that, going back to the Egyptian myth, God actually absorbed some of the essence of Apophis.

And this turned Set to his final state of being the evil entity in the Egyptian mythos. He was not exactly evil in the start of the myth, but he turned evil when the blood of Apophis was absorbed by him. And, of course, Set was another interesting example of a hero that stroke and cut all the heads of the snake-like creature with one blow.

Who is that, Set? What? Did you say Set? Yes. You mean in Egypt? Yeah, yeah. Okay, yes, because Set is basically the god that the Jews had introduced into Egypt, I think.

Yeah, it is obviously connected with the sunset and obviously is connected with the Saturn. And also, I think the Moon, there's a relationship between Set and the Moon, too. Yeah, yeah.

Maybe because the ancient Semitic deity, Sin or Shin, and it was the Moon God, which is also quite an interesting difference between the Arians and, well, maybe not the Arians and the Semites, but the later versions of the Arian mythos where the Sun God is male, usually is male, and the Moon is feminine. Now, there is some more, I would say, older versions, even in the Arian mythos that are representing the Sun-like feminine. And the Moon was masculine in Mani, the Moon God.

Yes. So, you must take in mind that some of the really ancient Arian tribes were Moon worshippers, especially this Ueji clan that was in the Far East, these red-headed people that were most likely one of the, I would say, originators of the Chinese Empire. They were, according to some theory, Ueji means Moon clan or Moon worshippers.

And, of course, they practiced, they shaved their hair, and this was the symbol of their Moon worshipper because the shaved skull represents the Moon. And there are some traditions in Bulgarian tradition, too, because Bulgarian rulers also shaved most of their hair, and they left, what is this, a stripe on the top, which represents Kundalini, most likely. Oh, yeah.

And even in the Bulgarian, there are a list of Bulgarian rulers that they ruled for hundreds of years with shaved heads, and this, according to the chronists, it was very important. I guess I'd fit right in then since I have a shaved head. What? I guess I'd fit right in then because I have a shaved head.

Yeah, so maybe this is some kind of subconscious relations with the forefathers, maybe. And also, not to mention that there are a lot of other hairstyles amongst the Eastern Germanic tribes that also include some shaving of hair or, for example, other things that are also interesting. For example, the typical Alemanni hairstyle that, how to say, is very representative of the outright fight, of course, the outright fight.

Yeah, yeah, this type of hairstyle was like a knot. It was called a Swabian knot. A knot? Yes, look at this.

Yeah, I'll check it out. Yeah, I've actually seen that recently, seemed to be reintroduced in some of the culture. I don't know if you want to call it the alt-right, but the more racist culture, they seem to be reintroducing that.

It's called the Swabian knot. Yeah, but what is representing the knot? It's probably representing maybe the Kundalini, like you had said before, something like that. Mm-hmm.

So, this is another thing that was popular amongst the Vikings and amongst the Bulgarians, this hairstyle with shaving part of the hair. And, of course, this is the hairstyle that was very popular amongst the Bulgarians and amongst the Ukrainians, by the way, this type. And, of course, always with long mustaches, because this was a symbol of entering the, I would say, the male society, or especially the warrior caste.

So, it's like a rite of passage. Yeah. A symbol of that.

And the other thing here was, of course, which was very typical for all Aryan warriors, was wearing a wolf skin. And one of the stronger, I would say, theories, at least in my mind, that the Bulgarian name is connected with the wolf skin, because Bolg, or Volk, was the name of the wolf. And, of course, Bolg was the legendary predecessor of Bulgarians.

And it was known, at least from Byzantium sources, it's known that the Bagaturs, Bulgarians, wore wolf skin over the armor. The exception of this rule are the Kovobars, that wore bear skin. And the Kovobar, Bol, in old Bulgarian means bear, and Kovo means something like great bear, so maybe the closest term is colossal, maybe.

So, they were basically, their name means great bears. Does that have something to do with the constellation, the great bear? Astrological constellation? Maybe because they were shamans, and also they took part, I don't know with what I could compare them. Maybe with the Druids, but the Druids, they usually didn't take part in the military action, but the Kovobars most likely were not only priests, but they were also officers, in many cases.

So, it's more like a Kshatriya caste. Yes, it was a military rank, but also it was a shamanistic, I don't know how to say. Basically, they were shamans, but also they were taking part in the administration and in the military.

The other translation of Kovobar, you know what is Kovrat? Kovrat? Yes. Not too sure, no? I will show you. I'm pretty sure that there is a Wikipedia article about Kovrat.

Kovrat. How do you spell it, just so that the listeners can look it up? It's this thing, Kovrat. Okay, K-O-L-O-V-R-A-T.

This is, Kovrat is this. It's a symbol of the solar wheel, so basically it's a type of swastika. Yeah, it's funny on Wikipedia.

It says the only reference it gives to the mythological element is a purported Slavic pagan symbol of the sun. It's a purported because it's most likely Iranian, but this is Kovrat. Maybe you know the symbol, but you didn't know that it's called Kovrat.

Well, in Bulgarian it's called Koloborat with B, different languages with a little bit. Okay, so that's a swastika. So basically Kolobors were the solar priests.

It's a very interesting connection between the bear and the sun. Maybe it is because the people connected the power of the bear, this natural power with the power of the sun, or maybe it is because the bears are sleeping, most of the time, of course, with some exceptions, are sleeping during the winter and when the sun is strong in the sky during the spring, the bears are coming out of their caves. So maybe this is another connection there.

Or maybe, of course, there was a sacrifice of bears for in the name of the solar god, because basically to become a Kolobor, when you are initiated in the warrior society to become a Bagatur, you must hunt down a wolf and kill a wolf. And killing the wolf, you are wearing your skin, but the spirit of the wolf is somehow a protector and also some kind of ancestor. So you're wearing the skin, you're obtaining the qualities of the wolf.

The wolf is a very smart animal, very aggressive in some way, but aggressive in an organized manner. So the Aryan warriors were emulating the wolf pack. And this is one of the things that we are missing, because I saw quite a fit in one of the videos that one of my comrades here in Burgas posted me.

He posted a quite fit white man on the streets of some American city. He was quite well built. And he was surrounded by raging apes from all sides.

And of course, he was beaten up because there were too many. Yeah, that's the way they've always attacked us historically, is en masse, because they can't fight one-on-one. But what if they meet us on similar terms, if we have our old military and hierarchical organization? Who will be victorious? I just think that they don't have chances if they meet even a group of white males just with some organization and training.

Yeah. Yeah, they're basically cowards and they scatter whenever they sense even the slightest bit of pushback. So yeah, we are lacking this wolf pack mentality.

And of course, the Jews are destroying the alpha wolf, so to say, and poisoning the minds of the rest. But yes, the wolf was part of the initiation ceremonies. I believe that the Germanic warriors also had this ritual with the wolf.

Also, the bear. Now, when you were initiated to become a clover, there was an Asian source that said that Bulgarians basically consider more noble the warriors that are more successful in battle. So you can rise through the ranks being a brave and skillful warrior, which later, with the adoption of Christianity, all this concept was lost.

And this is one of the reasons that the nobility adopted Christianity quite fast, because this gave them a big advantage. They basically walked the possibility of any out of their caste to become a nobleman. Yeah, it gives them a monopoly on power.

Yep, especially the king or the tsar. In the ancient times, they were kind of elected, or even if they were considered to be from a noble family or some noble origin, they were not invincible. In many cases, if they lost the battle or they just were not suitable for rulers, they were killed and sacrificed to the gods.

So, it was a kind of authoritarian system, but kind of democratic system, if this makes sense. Because if you're a shitty ruler and a weak military leader, you're just removed from the scene. And yeah, even if you're descendants of the gods, so basically some ancient noble bloodline, you're not attached to the throne.

Contrary to Christianity, when you're basically second to only Rabbi Yesu and you are just his tool to the earth or whatever. You're nothing according to him or in relation to him. So, yeah, Christianity gave a lot of advantages for the aristocracy or aristocrats with a big rat at the end.

And that's why I must remind you that, because you're quoting Evola, he was an aristocrat. Yeah, that's a problem with caste systems, that they become crystallized. Yeah.

And I think that the caste system must be based on race, but also it must be based on merits. Yeah. I think that's actually what he was contending in some of his works.

I don't think that he advocated a rigid caste system unless it was based on merit. I think he had made qualifications for that in some of his works so that it could prevent what you're saying, the monopoly on power by weak people and people who are degenerated. Otherwise, it would just lead to decadence.

Nietzsche referred to them as spiders. And yeah, I could agree. I could agree.

There are a lot of people that were born in noble families, but they don't possess noble qualities. They're not ubermensch by birth, so to say. They're just born in noble families.

And especially in the modern times, where the aristocrats are just whatever, minor power, but they're most likely part of the big capital of this rich, treacherous, supposedly white, I said supposedly because there's a lot of race mixing with Jews, elite that was treacherous to the people, and they didn't fulfill the role of protectors, of guardians of the race, of guardians of their folk. And that's why Adolf Hitler didn't like them. They were the traitors, all the Catholic Prussian nobility.

They were the ones who sabotaged the Third Reich. Yeah, I can give an example with Bulgaria, where our Tsar Boris III, I mean, even the first was kind of... He was the guy that adopted Christianity. But anyway, Boris III, well, he was cousin of the British imperial family.

I believe that there is an heir to the throne that is from our branch of Saxo-Cuburgota. So he was... Well, a lot of Bulgarian nationalists will hate me for that, but I believe that Boris was a traitor, and that he just was, how to say, giving information for the Brits and maybe even for the Soviets. And yeah, of course, at this point I hardly will prove my term, but we are finding more and more evidence that this Saxo-Cuburgota family, they were just, let's say, part of the globalist agenda.

Or some people believe that they were directly mixed with the elite Jews, so to say. Yeah, the Queen of England looks pretty Jewish, if you look at her face. Yeah, yeah.

And the Queen of England, I believe, is some kind of... Yeah, Saxo-Cuburgota. Third cousin or second cousin of our eventual Tsar. But anyway, so because it's quite a long conversation, I receive some criticism, which I accept, that we did a quite long conversation, that people don't listen to long conversations.

Okay, yeah, we can cut it down then. I could read a little bit of the history of the swastika, and let's open the possibility for the next podcast that we'll talk a little bit about the ancient traditions. Sure.

And let's read something about the swastika, because a lot of people don't know that the swastika actually, the name could... that maybe came from India, but the swastika is not really an Indian symbol, it was an Aryan symbol. So, the earliest known swastika is from 10,000 BCE, and part of intricate minder pattern of joint of swastikas found in late Paleolithic figurine of a bird. So, it was found in Mezhy in Ukraine.

It has been suggested that the swastika may be stylized picture of a stork in the flight, as a carving was found near phallic objects. This may also support the idea that the pattern was fertility symbol. By the way, they always make the fertility symbol, how to say, twist in the so-called archaeology.

They always claim that everything's a fertility cult. Yeah, everything that they cannot... It's an easy explanation, anyway. Yeah.

Mirror image swastikas, clockwise swastika, anti-clockwise, has been found in ceramic pottery in Divitashka Cave, Bulgaria, dated 6,000 years BCE. By the way, this is a little bit old information. We found even all the swastikas in Bulgaria, 7,000 years old, even 8,000 years old.

Just look at the frog swastikas found in Bulgaria. Frog. I've used the frog swastika for a very long time.

Yeah, I think I've seen that myself. That's the one made of jade, is it? Yep. Yeah, this is the frog swastika found in Bulgaria, 8,000 years old.

Some people thought that this was because it was found in the similar time period with the Pepe meme. So, there was some synchronicity there. Yeah, maybe.

You see a lot of Pepe on the link you sent there. Yep. I believe that at some point the Aryans also looked at the qualities of the frogs and the reptiles.

Maybe from there came this biblical phrase, be wise like a serpent. Yeah, it's interesting that maybe we derived from some type of Anunnaki type being of that sort like Enki in Sumeria because I've got sort of webbed fingers and toes myself. One time I was at the police station getting my fingerprints checked and they said that my fingerprints were like aliens and they couldn't read them at all.

They had to do multiple fingerprints. When I applied to the military here, it was the same thing. They had to do multiple fingerprint tests because they couldn't read them for some reason.

We discussed that the ancient Aryans, especially the Scythians, had six fingers and it was in this population. This came from several distant sources. At first, I thought it was some kind of Jewish propaganda because of the Bible.

They mentioned that the Philistines, the giant Goliath had six fingers, I believe, and several other giants had six fingers. By the way, the Philistines came from the Balkans, so they were Aryan people. The Chinese mentioned that these Tukharians, these very ancient Aryan migrants in the Far East, they choose their princes, their heirs to the throne, based on the number of their fingers.

So basically, they were looking for these ancient genes for some reason. There are other things that I don't mention. These stories in the Bulgarian myths, there are two groups of reptiles.

I believe I talked with Dungard about that, that there are two groups of reptiles. One is a negative force of reptiles. The other is these white dragons, these noble in Bulgaria, they're called Zmei.

They very often are mixing with the human population, especially with blonde women. They're producing basically ubermensch, very tall, very brave, and in many cases, very positive heroes. So maybe there is some, how to say, some symbology behind that.

Yeah, it's got to be some sort of paleohistorical reality at some point that we were interbred with, or that we're a result of that interbreeding with some type of alien being. So where was I about the Swastika? So the earliest Swastika in the subcontinent can be dated 3000 BCE. So basically, the Aryan invasion.

Investigators have also found a series of them with maturing geometrical or the Swastikas that date to before the Indus Valley Civilization. So they claim that the symbol didn't come with the Aryans, but it predates the Aryans. But on the other hand, I believe that there are older Aryan settlements in India, because we lost our great global civilization at some point, and the Aryans were just reclaiming the old civilization, not conquering other people.

Let's put it that way. Their efforts have traced references to Swastikas in Vedas at about that time. Well, the Vedas are created by the Aryans.

The investigators put forth the theory that the Swastika moves westward from India to Finland. Oh my God, Scandinavia. So how the fuck these older Swastikas were found in Bulgaria and in Ukraine? Yeah, they keep screwing themselves over with their false history that they make up.

Move westward to Finland, Scandinavia, and Scottish Highlands, and other parts of Europe, in England, and Lithuania, so basically bullshit. Carvings of the symbol had been found in Iklmur, such as the Swastika stone. Swastikas have been found on pottery in archaeological digs in Africa.

My suggestion, of course, that was brought by the Aryans in the area of Kush, and on pottery on the Jebel Barkal temples, I suppose, in Iron Age designs of northern Caucasus Mountain, so-called Kuban culture. In Neolithic China, Mai Bang, in other Iron Age at the station, the Swastika can be associated with Indo-Europeans or Aryan cultures, such as Illyrians, and other people that lived on the Balkans. And I believe most of the white Albanians are Illyrians these days.

Indo-Iranians or Aryans, Celts, Greeks, Germanics, and, of course, this interesting group called Slavs. In Sintasa culture, so-called country of towns, ancient Indo-European settlements in southern Russia, it has been found a great concentration of some of the oldest Swastika patterns. So they indirectly admitted that the Aryans were the main culture that were the carriers of the Swastika.

So... Is that, that was Wikipedia you were reading off mainly? Yeah, this Wikipedia article is the shortest, but I had the books for the Swastika that were written, let's say, before 1944, and they're much more... Yeah, more exact. I'd say, much more interesting and much more closer to the truth than this bullshit article. For example, if I remember correctly, because I've read the book quite a long time ago, they said that the Swastika, as a symbol, was associated, of course, with the chariots, chariots of the Aryan warriors, because the Aryans used the chariot like a tank, basically.

And it was a great advantage against the non-Aryan populations that were most likely peasants and farmers. And they, in this book, the author was, well, some of the Bulgarian citizens were found. Gancho Tsenov, it's a Bulgarian professor that studied in Germany, and it was one of the guys that debunked the Turkic origin of the Bulgarians and debunked the existence of the Slavs, basically, based on ancient sources, and he knew several ancient languages.

So, a very smart guy. And, of course, during the time of communism, his works were totally banned, because Stalin didn't like the idea that there is no such thing like Slavs, and Bulgarians were not some kind of Mongol Turks, but quite a major Iranian group of people. So, anyway, he mentioned that, and if you look at the depiction of Gotopolo, for example, the chariot of the sun is with four horses, which, of course, is a symbol of the four main directions of the world, but also, yeah, if you think about the chess, there are four horses there, and the horses are moving in L, for you it's L, for me it's G, basically, or G shape, or L shape for the Latin users, so to say.

And what are four horses moving in, or next to each other, they're forming swastika, basically. So, it's a very ancient solar symbolism, connected with the sun chariot, and with the moving of the sun on the sky, and through moving up on the larger scale, in the cosmic scale, moving through different astrological constellations. Yeah, doesn't it have something to do with being at the North Pole, looking at the Pole Star, or something of that sort, too? This is also possible, and, well, we see the pattern of creation, so to say.

When you see a symbol that, at least the Asians look at the world in such a way, when you see the same symbol in different ways, like movement of the sun, of course, the sun is moving through the sky every single day, and, of course, we're moving through different seasons, and we're moving through different astrological eras, and so on. So, the people, and, of course, the movement of a big dipper on the Pole Star, or around the Pole Star, and this creates the pattern of the swastika. This, for the Asian people, and for me, honestly, represents the symbols of creation, because this is not a coincidence.

It's not just chaos, as the modern science tries to convince us. And, of course, for me, from an esoteric perspective, as I said before, swastika is a symbol of liberation from the cube of the demiurge, this totally unnatural structure, because there are no cubes in nature with these perfect shapes. And this idea of the totalitarian Jewish regime, based around this totalitarian Jewish religion, that everyone is equal and put in the black cube, is opposing to the air and nature.

So, the swastika is basically the opening of the cube of liberation. Yeah, that's what I was thinking about. It's like a flying apart.

And, yeah, we must look at this thing. And, of course, some people will say, well, what about the cube of Pandora? And when you open the cube, there are all kinds of evils that are coming out. I guess you better go back in the cube, back to the matrix.

You might be afraid of dangers there. Yeah, but we must not forget that the symbols could be used in different interpretations. There's some need of natural order.

I'm not against the natural order of things, but we must be very aware of unnatural enforced order, total control over the world enforced by the Jews, which at some point, at least this is my belief, will be basically devils, some of their deity in the form of some kind of artificial intelligence or something like that. I'm thinking that the deities of the Jews are actually some type of literal beings that they're trying to bring onto the earth or something of that sort. Yeah, I believe so.

Yeah, maybe we can speak about that next time if you want to come on again and we can go more into detail about the mythology. I hope that I will have enough time because recently, interestingly enough, even though the income is quite less because of the Jufu, my work, let's say I'm quite busy, quite surprising for me. I hope that we will continue with the theme of what is going on in Eastern Europe and what was the traditions of the Aryans in Eastern Europe and we will try to compare the traditions of the different groups.

Yeah, try to get back to some type of authentic tradition that we can represent, that we can bring back into reality. The easiest thing to represent, and I believe it's typical for all Aryan religions and cultures, is four major dates. Actually, there were eight major dates, but four really major dates.

If you look at them, one is 21st to 22nd of December, which for the old Bulgarians was the Day of the Black Sun, by the way, just saying, and this is for the Romans, it's Saturnalia. Yeah, you mean like this image here, the image I just sent you? Wait a second. Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah.

And you, basically. And, of course, Imbog, which is, of course, 1st and 2nd of February, at least for the Bulgarians, 1st and 2nd of February, and now it's connected with Dionysus. This is a date connected with male virility, and with wine, and so and so.

In Bulgaria, this is 21st and 22nd of March, and it is, in Bulgarian tradition, is called Astara, with A, with Astara, with Astra, which is, of course, Ostara. Which became Easter, that Christians stole and they took it over. In Bulgaria, the 1st of May, which is the Irmin Den, the May Day, basically, is the Irmin Den, or the Day of Irmin, this holy tree, holy oak of the Bulgarians, and so on.

I mean, the holy days are basically the same. So, this is the easiest way to honor our forefathers and honor our gods, is to just gather, and if you're Irish or Celt, you will celebrate your forefathers, of course, and celebrate the Celtic deities. If you're Germanic, you will celebrate Wotan, let's say, and Thor, or Foresti, or Baldur, or something like that.

Yeah. And so, I mean, every group could refer to their forefathers, and we're basically referring to the same deities, because for me, of course, I refer to the Sky Father, to like Tanger, but actually, I had a quite nice representation of Odin on my walls. And I don't think that there's any difference between Tanger and Odin, and also between Taranis, Tanger is quite similar, of course, the thunder god of the Celts, and I don't think that there's any difference between Jupiter, and Zeus, and Tanger.

So, basically, Sky Father of the Aryans, Uranus, so to say. Yeah. So, in other words, what Julius Ebola called the Solar Uranian Consciousness.

Yeah, because the Sun is the true Christ, so to say, the Aryan Christ. Doesn't the Sun represent the mind in occultism? Yeah. It represents reason or something, because it's constant? Yeah, it's also the crown chakra.

So, yeah, just find your traditions, find your traditions and connect with your forefathers in that way. Because most of the people, even if they're Christians, they are basically celebrating on the same dates, or close to these dates, on some fake saints, some fake, in some cases, Jewish agents, especially these first apostles and whatever, they were obvious Jews. And in some of the future podcasts, I will show you icons in Bulgaria that were based on very ancient depictions of the first apostles, including Rabbi Yeshu.

And I say very ancient, in some cases, people think that they're basically copies of some people that drew Rabbi Yeshu and his apostles in person. So really ancient stuff. And they don't look like white people, let's put it that way.

So, yeah, Christian identity, white, Israelite or whatever. Yeah, I saw a painting of the early church fathers and every single one of them was a Jew. They're like a swarthy looking Jew.

Very swarthy with typical hook noses. Yeah. Very swarthy.

And the thing that struck me was the picture, the icon in Bulgarian church called Bujana Church. It is around 13th century, I believe. Basically, these artists, they took the images of the apostles and Rabbi Yeshu from much older icons.

Maybe this is one of the reasons that there was a thing called iconoclasts in the Byzantine Empire. They were destroying icons. Trying to cover their tracks, erase history.

Yeah, yeah. And you can see amazing stuff. Negroes, Saint Nicholas, not the archetypical Saint Nicholas, but the real Saint Nicholas.

Well, he was Negro. No joke. Icons representing some homosexual activities amongst the apostles.

Terrible stuff. I mean, obviously, there was some hidden messages in this thing. But the thing that struck me was that this emitting looking Rabbi Yeshu, he was called Pantocrator.

In Greek, this means the ruler of the world. And he was basically, his feet were over the heads of the kings. And with another foot was on the, of course, the throne of God or whatever.

And the other was stepping on the heads of the kings. So what the fuck is that? Is that some Asian globalistic allegory of Jewish supremacy? Probably, yeah. So yeah, this was all for me.

I hope that soon we will make another podcast and it was a pleasure. Yeah, it was nice to talk to you again. So anytime you're available, I'll be available for however long.

I don't know what's going to happen to me, but hopefully things will work out. I'd actually like to look more into Bulgaria itself and potential relocation. So if anybody listening wants to get in touch with you, then I guess I should just give them your channel, your Bitchute channel contact.

Yeah, my Bitchute. But back in the time, it was a little bit easier for me to find comments because of the Discus system. And now if someone is writing in the videos, very often I cannot see.

And maybe it's better to contact you and to contact via Protonmail or Skype or Telegram or something. Yeah, I guess people can just leave comments after the video. And then from there, I can get in touch with you if you want to hook up with them or further the ideas.

We are open for ideas for people and for healthy people, actually. We want healthy people that have bones and to build something for themselves and for the future Aryan generation. So hopefully it will work out.

Everybody's got to stop being a consumer and just start taking risks and using your money to work together as a wolf pack instead of trying to be a lone wolf, because you'll just be overrun by others eventually. Yeah, because the people don't understand that the wolf pack multiplies the power of the single wolf. And this is how the things were and this is how the things are.

Just look at these single insulated men that were fighting surrounded by Negroes. And I don't know if this is the future. It's not a good future.

Sometimes you have to maybe take a step back or try to you know, regroup at a more advantageous position so that you can take a more defensible position. Exactly, exactly. Let's regroup.

Let's gather resources. Let's concentrate on some social activities that are beneficial for the members of the pack. Let's put it that way.

And then we'll push back. This is the most politically correct term that I can imagine. So yeah, hail victory.

Yes, hail victory. Nice talking to you again. Bye.
