

Nordlux: Organization and Survivalism

Okay, so last time we spoke we were talking a lot about disinformation agents, but this time I think it's imperative at this time to discuss more about practical strategies for organization and survivalism and possible relocation to wherever specific areas people need to be to relocate in order to become most effective in their activism. What are your thoughts in terms of, without revealing your location, in terms of the sort of general map of the United States and of North America in general, we'll exclude South America and Central America, in terms of what people should do, you know, should they stay where they are, should they go elsewhere? What are your thoughts on that? Well, I think retreating is one thing, and that is not necessarily good because you can get a concentrated amount. It's like the whole ethno-state idea.

It's sort of like white Zionism. I'm not really too fond of that whole idea, but I agree with people, you know, if need be, relocating and sort of creating a community where they're at. You know, if they live in an area where it's basically impossible to really create any sort of community, then, you know, that's where I think the whole balkanization stuff and, you know, let's all just move to the Northwest, that's not going to work.

Yeah. I know that some echo in the microphone there. I know that Richard Butler is rumored to have been a half-breed Cherokee Indian.

And he was also Freemason. Yeah. And he was also rumored to be an FBI agent that sort of co-opted a guy named Josh Jost-Turner's National Socialist Kindred, which they tried to set up in the Pacific Northwest.

So I think the whole operation for the Butler plan was a deliberate PSYOP on the part of the JAWG system to derail whatever potential sort of Lebensborn communities that that Josh Jost-Turner guy had intended to set up. Yeah, I think Tex Mars did a broadcast about that, even though Tex Mars was probably a shill because he was pushing, like, you know, kind of fundamentalism. And I think he's, wasn't he published by the Barnes Review? Yeah, Tex Mars was sort of like an Alex Jones regular.

Yeah, an Alex Jones type, basically. So you really can't trust that guy. But yeah, absolutely.

Richard Butler definitely seemed to me to be, just by looking at his physiognomy, a half-breed Cherokee Indian, as he was rumored to have been. I mean, it makes perfect sense. So what is the point of all that Balkanization? Well, to me, that just suggests that that's exactly what the Jews want, is just to try to fragment America, because America is the greatest threat to their tyranny in the world.

Not only because it's the most strongest superpower, but the people there, you know, a lot of them are, some are aware of what's going on, and they have the firepower and so forth to actually do something about it. So their intention is just to do what they did in the Balkans and Yugoslavia and so forth during the 90s and in the Soviet Union, too. Well, when they created the Soviet Union, you know, just mass migrate people around and then create chaos so that they're forced to go.

They've been doing that with economic means, too, by outsourcing jobs in the States and then by incentivizing people of necessity to go to certain locations to have work. So they split up families economically as well through that economic means. So people are basically forced to migrate around, and that way it disrupts their communities, their ancestral communities, and it breaks up their families so that they can't form any, you know, traditional roots or maintain their roots.

So to me, that's exactly what the Jews want, is to create that Balkanization agenda. Yeah, it's sort of like what you mentioned earlier about having these splinter groups where, you know, you have different figures that would advocate for different sort of plans. It's like you had Covington in the Northwest, and then you had, I think, Roper was in the South, and then Tom Kaczynski was in the Northeast.

And it just sort of creates a, you know... Divide and conquer tactic. Divide and conquer, you know, that was what I was basically trying to say. And that's obviously exactly what Jews want.

So to me, that's their whole agenda is to... I think I heard that just today when I was listening to Renegade Broadcasting talk about Dugan, from Dugan himself, from the Jewish chaos magician liar's mouth. He was saying something to the effect of how they wanted to facilitate these sort of nationalist movements, like black nationalist movements and so forth, so that they could create that Balkanization. Yeah, I find it questionable those who want to advocate Islam and want to work with... No, no, Rockwall.

I think Rockwall actually did that, where he went over to the Nation of Islam and tried to work with them. But I don't know. I mean, I think that in the end, that would possibly end up something being counterproductive.

Yeah, I would say so. Just let the... Because they're really against you. I mean, not every time, just because the enemy, you know... Yeah, the enemy of your enemy is not your friend.

...isn't always your friend, you know. Pretty much everybody's against white people in this whole world, including most white people. So you're not going to have much in the way of friends with these deceiving people who practice taqiyah and various other, you know, coded in their religion.

They practice lying. So... And that's a typically Middle Eastern mentality, a non-white mentality, is just being a mendacious deceiver, for the most part. So yeah, you can't deal with these people.

Let them do whatever they want. Keep away from them. Don't affiliate with them.

Disassociate yourself from them. Whatever they do, it's nothing to do with you. So as to the Balkanization, though, obviously Dugan is pushing that also.

So why would you want to push that if you're a white nationalist, when Dugan's worshipping Eilerster Crowley and is actually a proven Jew and working with Putin, who is a Jew, and the whole... Well, coincidentally, Covington was also a Crowleyite. So yeah, there you go. Crowley... Anyone pushing Crowley is definitely a red flag.

Yeah, it's obviously proven that Crowley was an agent who was working against the Third Reich. He was... I think he facilitated the Anglo-Boer... Was it the Anglo-Boer War or something along those lines in South Africa that he did? I think he might have been a facilitator of the concentration camps there, which killed a lot of Boers in South Africa. And Winston Churchill also did that.

Yeah, Anton LeVay or Howard Stanton Levy, which is his real name. I know that I think he was a proponent of Crowley as well. Yeah, well, obviously that's all just Jewish Kabbalah that they're pushing.

So if Dugan is pushing that, and then he's pushing the Balk at the same time, that should clue anybody with half a brain in that it's obviously a psyop that the Jews want you to buy into. You know, Richard Spencer, all these other Nazbol people on the alt-right, Eric Stryker, David Duke, all these other sort of storm drain, storm front types, they're all... Well, another thing about them is they also push a sort of Stalinist... Yeah, that's what Stalinism is. I saw a stream where it was Brian Roo and David Duke, and they were just talking about how great Stalin was.

And I was like, okay, that's a red flag. Yeah, they're obviously disinformation agents. That explains why Brian Jew is so hostile toward me, because I sent him a lot of content that he picked apart a lot of those sorts of conceptions.

And he really flew into a rage when I stated that Theravada Buddhism was not a white religion, it was created by Jews in Tibet. And then he really... Well, he looks like... He has sort of a Jordan Peterson look to him. Well, he's got sort of like more of a, I don't know, strange looking face for a German person.

Yeah, he definitely doesn't look German. I mean, he has that kind of beak, nose and... Yeah, I was going to mention that. It looked like a beak, basically like a parrot's beak or something like that.

Yeah, like his profile picture or avatar or whatever. I mean, he just looks like a vulture.

Yeah, he looks like Gargamel from the Smurfs, basically, sort of.

Speaking of Gargamel, do you want to talk about this character who has been harassing you at all? Yeah, we can maybe just do that to just get it out of the way. But I'd like to try to stick to the topic of, you know, organization and balkanization and that sort of thing. Yeah, and the thing is, is a lot of these organizations, you know, to really organize effectively, you really need to be careful who you surround yourselves with and have it sort of a secret society kind of thing where it just has to be underground and not too open and not too, you know, you really have to organize with those that you trust and you know aren't agents.

Because one agent, one infiltrator, even just one idiot, can ruin an entire organization. Yeah, if you look at that Tony Avola guy who set Matt Hale up. Yeah, set Matt Hale up, exactly.

You know, with the Order, Tom Martinez with Bob Matthews was another one. Yeah, so these people are, assuming those are even legitimate. Glenn Miller, obviously.

Yeah, so anyway, with respect to this one guy that we're going to discuss, this gang stalking guy, Jewish gang stalking guy who tried to involve himself with me and I, in my naivety, involved myself with him just because I wanted to get that particular topic out into the public consciousness about Jewish gang stalking, how they tail after you and work with the police and spying on people like they did in the East German Communist Republic there, the DDR and the USSR also. They use the same techniques that they're now using today in gang stalking people. So I wanted that topic out.

But this one guy called Jewish gang stalking on Bitchute, he got my Bitchute, one of my Bitchute channels shut down because, I don't know, because I didn't have a willingness to continue on with him and he didn't really want to deal with me because he was saying that, you know, I'm dealing with Jews because of involving myself with various people who he's suspected to be operatives or Jews or something. So a lot of melodrama and silliness, but he was basically stalking and harassing me to some extent because of his, you know, this sort of melodramatic nonsense that happens to exist in this silly movement. You know, a lot of silly melodrama and childish behavior that is counterproductive and just a drain of energy.

And so this particular individual just represents that archetype, the archetype of the time waster, of the melodrama type. So anytime you see that sort of thing, even if the guy is not an agent, it's probably best just to keep your distance because, you know, they're not being serious enough or understanding the situation that goes on in this world, which is a life or death situation. You know, that's why everybody's got to start getting organized and getting involved in actually sustainable communities in order to secure your survival and be effective in activism and trying to recruit more people.

Otherwise, you're going to, you know, wind up like Matt Hale or somebody of that sort, assuming they were even legitimate at all, of course, if we want to assume that. Got your channel shut down, which only had around 200 subscribers, I think. Yeah.

Yeah. But still, that's one of the channels that I had that had a lot of like a good archive of information. You know, the fact that they're shutting entire channels down, I mean, that in itself, you know, shows you that I don't think Bitchute is really going to last.

I think at some point we might have to go back to YouTube and just use coded language or something at some point, because it's clearly about shutting down competition. Yeah, I don't think that that's going to be a possibility to go back to YouTube because they have such strict guidelines. But there are live leak and real dot video or alternatives.

I think the daily. I've heard good things about LBRY. I don't know if you're familiar with that one, but I would rather not go to Goyim TV or, you know, that World Truth site, which is full of psychos.

Yeah. Well, basically that gang stalking guy, Jewish gang stalking is affiliated with that Goyim TV so far as I know. And that's probably just an entire operation.

And he himself is probably just some type of Christian or Antifa person because he seemed to be pretty defensive about Christianity when I was criticizing that. You know, he was always talking about old Christianity and so forth. And that's just part of their psyop, the Christian identity thing to try to claim that the old Christianity was actually good, blah, blah.

No, no. They call it real Christianity. That's what they call it.

Real Christianity. Of course, real Christianity is witch burnings and the Inquisition and censorship and everything else. They enabled Jews to collect the money through usury while they, you know, they simultaneously scolded them and pretended that they were against it, but they still let them do that.

So obviously, that proves that they're just working hand in glove with the Jews throughout the whole time. The Jews created Christianity from the beginning just as a means of putting white people into mental bondage to themselves so that they could create their race mixed government. Christianity just works hand in glove with the Jews.

Anybody pushing anything else is obviously just either naive on the one hand or they're an operative who just wants to hook people into Christianity, which is what Jews want. And that's even what Nazbol functions as. It functions as this, the whole alt-right, as some sort of nebulous logocentrism that babbles on about nebulous ideas that don't have any real or tangible about them.

You know, it's just God and tradition and so forth. It doesn't really say anything very specific. Well, it's sort of like appeals to pathos and emotive.

You know, you sort of see that with a lot of these politicians. You know, for example, yesterday, I was watching Joe Biden's DNC speech. And, you know, I do check in to see what, you know, these people say every now and then because it can give you an insight on what's to come possibly, what's in their plan.

And basically throughout the speech, you talked about like stopping hate and, you know, really, you know, light over darkness and love over hate and just a lot of like sugary kind of emotive, you know, material that they use to sort of reel you in. You know, it's kind of like a social engineering technique. Yeah, they basically just utilize emotional programming techniques where they disengage the rational brain by engaging the emotional brain.

So when one's active, the other one is not so active. Just, you know, a typical technique on the part of Jews. Everything is just theater to these people.

They don't care about truth. They just care about what's effective for them. They're just pragmatists, basically.

Yeah, it's like, you know, they sort of have people on their strings in a literal sense. You can just sort of look at it like, hey, look over here. This is the problem.

And then they raise the other hand with the other marionette or whatever it is and say, hey, look over here. No, this is the problem. And they just sort of invent these issues, sort of like this whole Corona virus stuff going on now.

Yeah, it's all just basically smoke and mirrors that they use to try to... Create problems out of nowhere. Yeah, problem, reaction, solution. It's all the same dialectical little games that they play.

Just amazing that the average person hasn't figured it out yet. That's the problem. Of course, they never will because they just believe whatever is put before them like an animal.

That's why the Jews call them the goyim. That's why we need to keep away from people like that to create a parallel society so that these people, the average person, does not know of us and we just disappear like the gray man into society. That's why I think isolating yourself excessively is not a good idea because that'll be just like the Branch Davidians where they can strike at you and just kill you with drone strikes or whatever the case.

If you're going to go and hide away in the woods or pretend to be some sort of neo-pagan dressing up like Varg Vikernes. Because that's a sign off that they're running also. Varg Vikernes is probably one of their operatives.

He probably always was. He was probably born into a generational... You're going to piss off the cult behind him, Saint Vikernes. You're criticizing Saint Vikernes, man.

That's the way they always work their psyops. They create these gurus, these figures that people worship and become emotionally attached to so that anybody who criticizes their guru, they attack based upon emotional classical conditioning. That's obviously the psyop they're running.

Naturalism is what they want. They want anarcho-primitivism. They want people to be running away into the woods, worshipping sticks and stones.

That way they can have total control for themselves. That's why I don't advocate that sort of thing because that leads to the Branch Davidians and Ruby Ridge where you could just be targeted and done away with by their drone strikes or lawn... Yeah, just so you know, you're another Randy Weaver. Yeah, that's what I'm saying.

You could just be targeted by some of their non-white or white operatives. I guess even white people wouldn't have a problem if they're a police officer or a military person to more or less kill you and assassinate you because most of them, they rationalize in their mind and reason speciously that, oh, this is for the safety and security of society. They'll just say whatever makes them feel good to justify their getting their paycheck because that's really what they live for.

All of these sorts of people, in large part, are just self-serving people. There is a point to be made though about how living in the cities, you sort of are surrounded by decay. Oh, it depends on what kind of city.

If something were to break out, as they call it, the siege, those types, they would say, oh, the system's going to collapse, man. Mason wrote about dead zones, calling them dead zones. Yeah, well, once again, it depends on the size of the city too.

A small city that's only 20,000 people is more of a small town than it is a city, but it's still technically a city. Exactly, but if you're in somewhere like Chicago, I would get out of there. Absolutely, yeah.

I would definitely not be anywhere in any city that's over 100,000 people or over 150 anyway. Only if that city is spread out in the woods in a very isolated place, that would be like 100,000 or 150,000. Anything that's close, like an hour's drive away to another larger city, I wouldn't want to be anywhere near there because there could be marauders, there could be whatever supply chain gets shut off by the military or something like that, then you're not going to be able to get food and shelter because not everybody can afford to just go and hide in the woods in a shack.

Even if they could, you're still a target because the government can just tail after you if they ever discover you. If you've ever stated anything of a racial nature, they've got the Jewish gang stalking thing going on and they can tail after you and follow you and find you. Then you're a target, you've got a target on your back and they can easily dispose of you if you've got nobody around you.

Most people that hang around way out in the middle of nowhere, like all those survivalists, most people look upon them as sort of a suspect bunch, all the people in towns and stuff. If you're going to be way out like that, you're going to be basically looked upon as a suspect by others. If you don't talk to people or involve yourself with them, then you're going to be even more of a target because then that makes you a social pariah and so forth.

You're looked upon as a sort of sketchy and potentially harmful character because that's the way the Jews brainwash people, that anybody who's not totally plugged into their little communitarian system becomes a criminal or something like that. That's why I would advocate just living in a city that's ideally under 150,000 people and ideally away from any larger city by at least an hour and a half's drive. I don't know what it's like in the States for topography.

I guess it's much more dense than in Canada, but in Canada there's vast stretches between cities of terrain. Right. So for where you are in America, not specifically where you are, but in America, I guess the topography is much more compact and dense, right? I would probably say so.

I think in Canada it's a little more or less just trees and less populated, more or less. But then again, Canada does have a higher land mass. It is a larger piece of land.

A couple of people I was talking to on Telegram were talking about having some kind of settlement in Alaska. I don't know how that's going to work. I'm not too sure that's a good idea because if you're going to be in that specific region, not only does it get extremely cold, of course you can chop down wood for firewood, assuming that they'll allow you with bylaws and allow you to have a wood stove.

Because I know that in Canada there are certain places that they outlaw having wood stoves. You're not even allowed by law to have that. So if anyone sees smoke coming out of your chimney, then they're going to be calling the police and then the police will be justified in going into your place and taking your wood stove from you.

So you're forced on the grid. But Canada is not America. Obviously Canada is more strict in terms of its laws.

It's more of socialist prison. But also in Alaska and in very cold places like Canada, if you're going to try to live out in the middle of nowhere, then it's much more difficult than it is in a lot of places in America, obviously, where you can just live out of a van or you can just live even in a ditch if you really had no other options. Because it's so cold, you'll have to live in a ditch.

I was talking to one guy where he was living in a cardboard box. I don't know how you do that. Well, that's what he claims anyway.

He could have been some sort of operative, just amusing himself and other things. No, this was in real life. This was like a homeless guy where he was like, yeah, I've been living in a cardboard box for a few decades.

And I was like, oh, okay. I wouldn't exactly take a homeless person's word for... Oh, I know. Yeah.

I mean, the guy had missing teeth and he was like totally very unkempt appearance. So I wouldn't advocate that. I'm just saying that homeless people are all pretty much liars because they're very devious people, right? Because they look upon everybody else as their enemy.

And so because they're treated poorly, so they become a very corrupt person morally. So I wouldn't believe what he says anyway. But in the warmer places in the States, yeah, you can live out of a van and stuff.

And that may very well be the best bet. If you've got like a covered clandestine van for van dwelling, you've got jugs of water in there. You've got food stocks.

Maybe you can have a trailer that you can pull behind you. Just leave it somewhere in the woods or whatever the case, in a campsite, or maybe just put it in one of those storage facilities or something or off somebody's land, you know, or something like that. And then you can just live like that and roam around doing activism.

That's what I'd personally do if I had the means to get out of this country. But here I am now trapped here. And it's so cold that if you want to set yourself up in sustainable survival, survivalist conditions, you have to have a power pole, you have to have electrical wiring run and so forth.

And that's super expensive. And then you've got to have, you know, a transformer put on there and stuff like that, unless you can buy it or get a lot with that on there and so forth. So it's all just a huge investment of time.

And then what happens if you either lose your job or don't have the means to sustain yourself there, then you're going to have to sell it off and you wasted all your time and effort. And then you're probably going to suffer a loss in terms of money. So, but the main thing, though, is if you're going to isolate yourself, just like a principle, a principle of war in the 48 Laws of Power, I believe they discussed this book, the the Jew Robert Greene wrote it.

One of the laws is about not isolating yourself, you know, because if you isolate yourself, you're an easy target. Whereas if you're like Mao Zedong says, you know, swim in the sea of the people. Right.

The revolutionary swims in the sea of the people, I believe is a quote. So in other words, the best bet is to live, you know, amongst the the actual people of a of a predominantly white area with which is below one hundred and fifty thousand people. Ideally, I would say at least an hour and a half drive away from other major cities.

Basically a ghost wall. Yeah, I would say that that's the only real option that you have in order to survive, because if you don't do that, then you're just going to be a target. What's that guy doing over there? Because whenever you move to a small town, every single person in that area or if you move outside of a small town, every single person in that area knows that terrain and they see the slightest change, they see that somebody's moved there, then they're going to want to know, why are you here? What do you do? You know, they're going to suspect that you're a drug dealer or something, because I tried to move to a small town before of like in a in a country in the countryside on farmland and so forth.

And pretty much everybody in that town is spying on you all the time unless you're plugged into their networks, unless you're a socially engaging person, and especially unless you're a Christian. A lot of these boonie places, they're the only people who live there are just Christians on the one hand or alcoholics on the other hand. So unless you're one of the two, then you're not going to fit into their demographics.

Unless you have a reason to be in one of these small towns, then you're just wasting your time even being there because you're not going to fit into the place and you'll be looked upon as an outsider. It doesn't even matter how long you live there either. Even living there for years, you still won't be accepted by the people there because they only ascribe value to people who actually live there, you know, who have a purpose.

But if you don't have a purpose to be there, then you may as well not go there at all because you're going to be shunned and ostracized by the people there for the most part. Exactly. Yeah.

If you're going to go somewhere where that's completely opposite to really the way, just kind of alien to who you really are, I think it would be a waste of time because if you were to go up and, you know, I'd say the worst possible place you could be would be like Chicago or New York or LA. Places like that where, you know, very cosmopolitan and a concentrated amount of people and, you know, and you and I are kind of more, you know, introverted types. So we wouldn't really like the loud crowd aspect of those places in general.

And it also would be a bad idea to live anywhere where you would stand out. And that's why I think it's a really bad strategy to go out and basically wear your ideology on your sleeve. That all that does is turn you into a bullseye at the end of the day.

Yeah, I actually learned that the hard way because I didn't really think that this world had gotten so serious where the mass consciousness was totally turned against that. So when I went to this small town that I ended up living in, I was actually walking around with like pins and stuff like that, being like an open racist. And yeah, you definitely get a lot of hostility on the part of the people there.

And then your reputation is basically ruined from the very beginning. For the most part, nobody's going to really have a willingness to deal with you. And even if they do, you know, you've got the local authorities there or something.

They're all brainwashed by the ADL and by the Jews and the local churches. They're always harassing you. So you're just bringing heat on yourself.

But at the time I was more naive and I didn't understand that. But I learned through my mistakes that you want to be just a blend in, be a gray man, basically the ghost wolf. Yeah, there are these great broadcasts called Ghost Wolf, but I've refrained from sharing them on Bitchute because I think that they would probably get me kicked off because they're very interesting broadcasts.

But he does talk about things like, you know, guerrilla warfare and, you know, lone wolf ops. And he also says like, you know, stuff like, you know, these fucking shit skins, these fucking, you know, stuff like that. I don't know if that would be, you know, with the way things are going with Bitchute, I'm not sure if that would be flagged down.

Even if it weren't, it wouldn't really be worth their while because they'll just ban it afterwards anyway. But at the same time, so far as I know, that Ghost Wolf podcast, that's basically more just pushing a terrorist angle, you know, as part of the style. Basically, yeah, yeah.

Like the guy would say things like, I want to train the next Joseph Paul Franklin and Joseph Tomasi. And, you know, basically, I don't know if I spoke to you about this before, but I distinguish between like a light side and a dark side Ghost Wolf. Light side being just blending in, you know, swimming with the sea of the fishes and try to survive and then change the minds of the people that you're around for personal survivalism and so forth.

Whereas the dark side is more like the overt Rahoah race war type, you know, the lone wolf operative type. Yeah, I would stay away from anyone who advocates going around and being a terrorist on the internet. I mean, that is like a complete red flag.

I mean, if you're legit and you're saying stuff like that, you probably get some knocks on your door and it's just not worth it. No, because what do you have to gain by broadcasting that or advertising that anyway? The only thing you're going to do is just bring heat on yourself. And then everybody will look upon you as a terrorist.

And of course, that's what they want, because they want people to actually, they want actual people like that, so they can point their finger at them and say, look at that guy, that guy's a terrorist, you know? Yeah, and it's like you see these types like, you know, Alex Linder, you know, who would order people around and say, you know, time to kill. Well, they don't actually really do anything. They just, they just say, oh, you need to do this.

I think that's a red flag in itself. Yeah, well, obviously, Linder's a Jew, and that's an agenda that he's pushing. So it's quite clear that that's what they want.

Yeah, and you mentioned that, you know, in the audiobook of Yawkey's Empyrean, which I found very impactful, you said that his audiobook, he reads it in sort of a snarky kind of sardonic tone. Yeah, Alex Linder. Kind of mocking his neologisms and his, you know, his whole wordage and ideas.

Yeah, that's why I basically just took it down. I didn't want to waste my time putting that up on any, you know, giving it any publicity, because it denigrates the work, which to me, if Alex Linder, who is a Jew, is denigrating something, then to me, that suggests that it's a threat to the Jews, because that's what the Jews always do, is denigrate anything that is a threat to their power. So that is obviously something that people should read then.

And that's why I'm more interested in that. I just put that up on Bitshoot, just this very moment, basically, within the last couple hours, Empyrean by Francis Parker Yawkey. I've actually yet to read the whole book.

I think he was legitimate, because he was killed. Yeah, it's either that, or he knew he was going to be executed, and then he committed suicide. I'm not too sure which is which.

Yeah, no one knows for sure. That's kind of like the legend of the guy. And apparently, he had a feud with Oswald Mosley for some odd, like, he was frustrated with Mosley, because he didn't publish his work.

And then Rockwell was also a critic of him, because he, Yawkey sort of would mention this sort of, you know, work with, you know, work with our enemy types to defeat the enemy, you know, the enemy of our enemy is our friend kind of thing. He does mention a little bit of that stuff. I think you can work with people to the extent you can work with them.

And of course, by that, I would mean, to the extent that they can be worked with at all. And to the extent you want to associate yourself with them, like I don't want to have any association, personally with Islam. I don't want to, I don't want any association with any sort of black Islamic types.

But I would support, you know, any sort of nationalist of their own kind, who doesn't want, you know, who's against the Jews, I would support.