

it degenerated like Judaism into complex nonsense - see, eg, Proclus' Theology of Plato. But, it preserved the seeds of Kabbalistic dialectic.

So, the older Canaanite construct is Eshmun-Reshet. The Greeks adopted this as "aspects" of Apollo, Asclepius and a "dark Apollo" - Orpheus ("the dark one"), Hermes, or, Dionysos. The Persians have Mithras as Shashaynt and Asmodeus. The later construct is the dichotomy of Apollo and Dionysos - made famous in early Nietzsche. The Kabbalistic concept are the paths of "severity" and "mercy", Hegel's thesis and anti-thesis, reconciled in synthesis.

In the modern world, we have "left" and "right" - the "left" moves us to a chaotic state, without hierarchy or differentiation, where everything is the same - ironically called "diversity". The "right" is a fake opposition created to reconcile opposing forces and unite them in a "wicked" synthesis. In Hinduism, you'd call this Shiva and Vishnu - Destroyer and Preserver. Shiva, the "left", destroys. Vishnu, "the right", tries to preserve, but, never rebuilds. Thus "history", as Marx conceives it, is a one-way path to destruction.

Hegelian ideas influenced all late 18th - 20th century ideas - and, is still influential. Is he a "progenitor of fascism"? What does that mean? Mussolini smashed and dismantled "the left", but, didn't do enough to try to restructure society until he founded the Italian Social Republic (something like that) under German guidance about 1943 - when it was too late. Was he a reaction intended to be impatient and to further the "progressive" Judeo-occult agenda? Not really. There was a real effort to break with modernity in Italy - it was just poorly implemented and it failed.

As for "fascism" broadly, in the Marxist sense of "something I dislike"? It's just meaningless - Marxist ignorance is the progenitor of the term.

As for drugs, I always thought the kindest thing that could happen to this country would be the invention of a painless, ultra-lethal, drug that would allow America's waste to self-euthanize. The fact is that all human life does not have value. Much of it is never-ending pain, poisoning a society that has poisoned it. And, much defective life cannot be recovered by society. So, let drug addicts kill themselves. It's like a human body. Live an easy life, consume garbage, and you develop useless fat cells - many genetically defective proto-cancers. Exercise, eat better, experience some scarcity - these cells either become something useful or die off.

I am opposed to trans-humanism. The purpose of life is not in this world. Transhumanism seeks a sterile immortality - the Kabbalistic ideal of man made god within this lesser creation. And, all efforts to "unite the world" in any form - to "rebuild the Temple" - are Kabbalah.

People do have identity. Our modern world makes them afraid to express it. However, they do
